

Counselling and Advice Services

Oncology

Dear patient

An oncological illness often affects all aspects of a person's life. Questions regarding employment and social security (sick leave, retirement etc.) need to be answered, and patient care measures (organisation and financing of outpatient and hospital services) are required. The difficult circumstances the patient and her entire family find themselves in require an empathetic and professional approach.

We offer

- Contact person for employment and social security related questions, including advice and assistance in claims enforcement
- Assistance in selecting and organising support services such as community centers, home emergency services, hospice, etc.
- Information on care allowances and application assistance
- Organisation of support services to relieve mothers receiving radiotherapy or chemotherapy
- Assistance in raising funds for illness related expenses
- Information and referral to an appropriate advice centre in case of domestic violence
- Advice and counselling for patients and their dependants
